Preface

The Minor Course is designed as an enriching supplement to a student's primary area of study, offering creative, technical, and conceptual insights into the dynamic world of visual communication. In today's image-driven culture, the ability to convey messages effectively through design is a highly valued skill, not only in traditional art fields but also across industries such as advertising, publishing, entertainment, education, and digital media.

This course introduces learners to the foundational principles of graphic design, visual aesthetics, and the use of professional tools and techniques in print and digital media. Emphasizing craftsmanship and creativity, the program nurtures the artistic sensibility of students while equipping them with practical skills in typography, layout design, image manipulation, branding, and illustration.

Through studio-based learning, interactive projects, and critical engagement with design theory and practice, students will gain hands-on experience and build a portfolio that reflects their unique design voice. This minor aims to broaden students' interdisciplinary perspectives, foster visual literacy, and empower them to communicate ideas with clarity, impact, and originality.

Whether students aspire to pursue a career in design or simply wish to enhance their visual communication skills, the Graphic Design minor serves as a compelling gateway to a more creative, design-aware future.

Faculty/ Discipline	FINE ARTS
Subject	MULTIMEDIA
Course Name	EDITING AND COMPOSITING (P)
Type of Course	MPC
Course Code	MG1MPCMMD100
Course Level	100
Course Summary	This course introduces students to the practical concepts and techniques of editing and compositing for creative media. It focuses on video editing, visual storytelling, and compositing workflows using industry-standard software. Students will learn the fundamentals of timeline-based editing, transitions, color correction, audio synchronization, green screen keying, layering, and visual effects integration. Emphasis will be placed on creating professional-quality edited sequences and composite shots for short films, advertisements, and multimedia projects.

Type of Course	MPC
Course Code	MG4MPCMMD200
Course Level	200
Course Summary	This course explores the fundamental principles and practical applications of package design, focusing on both 2D and 3D aspects of packaging for consumer products. Students will learn to conceptualize, design, and develop packaging that communicates brand identity, ensures product protection, and engages the target audience effectively. The course emphasizes the balance between form, function, sustainability, and visual appeal, integrating graphic design, structural design, and branding strategies. Students will work on real-world packaging challenges involving market research ,material selection, prototyping, and design presentation. Through studio-based learning, critiques, and project work, they will develop the ability to create innovative, practical, and sustainable packaging solutions aligned with industry standards.

Subject	GRAPHIC DESIGN
Course Name	GRAPHIC DESIGN PORTFOLIO (T)
Type of Course	MPC
Course Code	MG6MPCMMD300
Course Level	300
Course Summary	This course is designed to help students develop a professional and visually compelling graphic design portfolio that showcases their creative abilities, technical skills, and conceptual thinking. Through a structured process of project selection, refinement, personal branding, and layout design, students will learn to curate and present their work effectively for academic review, employment, or freelance opportunities. Emphasis is placed on storytelling, presentation skills, critique, and the integration of personal identity into portfolio development. The course culminates in the creation of both digital and physical portfolios supported by resumes and self-promotion materials, preparing students for entry into the design industry.

Syllabus

Teaching and Learning Approach	Classroom Procedure (Mode of transaction) The Graphic Design programme adopts a learner-centered, practice-oriented teaching and learning strategy that integrates theory, creativity, and technology. The approach focuses on developing students' conceptual thinking, visual communications skills, and technical proficiency through a variety of methods: Studio-based learning: Students engage in hands-on design projects, working individually and in teams, to explore design principles, typography, illustration, branding, and digital media. Lectures and seminars: Theoretical concepts of design history, aesthetics, visual culture, and contemporary practices are introduced through interactive lectures, case studies, and group discussions. Workshops and demonstrations: Practical sessions on software tools (such as Adobe Creative Suite, CorelDRAW, AI-based design platforms) and traditional media techniques.
